MEMORANDUM FOR:

Suggestion and Achievement Awards Committee

Office of Personnel

STATFROM:

Deputy Director for Administration

SUBJECT:

Employee Suggestion Regarding Control of

Conference Rooms

REFERENCE:

Form 610 to DDA from ES/SAAC, dtd 9 Nov 91

- 1. Per your request, I have reviewed the employee suggestion regarding centralized control of conference rooms. While the suggestion has, on surface, some merit, constantly changing requirements for conference space as well as the relocation of components inside and outside the Headquarters building and time-critical "exclusive use" considerations would require at least one full-time employee to manage this effort with the aid of a computer-assisted program. There are no resources available to support this effort on a centralized basis.
- 2. We have received few complaints concerning the current decentralized system for the utilization of conference space. It appears to be meeting the needs of most components and does not require resources dedicated solely for that effort. As you may be aware, components controlling conference rooms usually have assigned this task as a collateral task for an employee whose principal duties are in the secretarial field. In return for this effort, the component that houses the conference space has priority usage in most instances. This system has worked quite effectively, and I believe that any attempt at centralization would evoke an adverse reaction by many Agency components.
- 3. In light of the above, I believe that the effectiveness of the current procedures outweighs the relative merits of a centralized system. Please thank the employee for his thoughtful suggestion and concern for the effective utilization of space and resources.

Centralized Control of Conference Rooms	81-322
Because of the shortage of office space at CIA Headquarters, the number of onference rooms has been dwindling while the demand for them has remained steady or ven risen. The current method of locating and reserving available conference rooms sout of datea relic of bygone days when conference rooms were plentifuland esults in both inefficient use of the rooms that are available and unnecessary work nd frustration for those trying to reserve a conference room.
Conference rooms are currently the "property" of individual of operated at the discretion of the "owner." If the "owner" does not (contin	fices and are plan to use his ued on attached)
I suggest that all conference rooms be controlled by a central office such as the Office of Logistics or the Chief Receptionist. Individuals wishing to reserve a conference room should be required to give the length of the meeting, approximate number of participants, and type of meeting, i.e., staff meeting, briefing, interagency meeting, etc. This information would permit the central office to prioritize the requirement and place the meeting in a room of suitable size.
NTAGES Improved utilization of space and man-hours.
 Less time spent by secretaries and others on the phone searching office alone reserved approximately 150 conference rooms for allConference rooms currently in use for only one or two hours a day for most of the day. Small groups could be booked into appropriate size rooms making I for large groups. Prevent "bumping" of groups from a room at the last minute. 	day meetings in 1980.) could be in use
